Westmeath; in battle of Sleawyn in c. Westmeath Cairpre mac Neale Cairpre mac Néill defeats the Leinstermen; in battle of Sleawyn in Meath Colmán Rímid was victor, AClon. 73, 98; tl. Slewemore and tl. Slewinebeg, nr Mullingar, AFM i 223; as these tl. names do not exist, Hennessy and McCarthy in AU give Slane-more and Slane-beg, p. Dysart, b. Moyashel and Magheradernon, b. Moycashel and b. Rathconrath, c. Westmeath; the p. Dysart is 5 m. SW of Mullingar; if this Slane is Slemain then Medb and Conchobar pitched their camps 13 m. fr. each other; Medb was at Clártha Hill of Clare, fr. which, in case of defeat, she could retreat into her territory by the ford of Athlone, 15 m. away; Conchobar, says the Táin, was NE of her on a tulach in Slemain, 25 m. fr. Athlone; Medb's scout describes the arrival of 34 companies on a tulach (i.e. collis, Colgan TT 140); isin tulaig means on the hill as in n-oenmnái as a single woman, Windisch, TBC, 27; the Ulster host could not find room on one hill, but in or nr Slane More and Slane Beg is Belvidere demesne 3 m. SW of Mullingar, 'the house in which is perched on the crown of a very beautiful little hill half surrounded with others (little hills), variegated and melting into one another; it is one of the most singular places anywhere to be seen, and spreading to the eye a beautiful lawn of undulating ground margined with wood, PGI i 248; if this was not the camping ground of Conchobar on the E bank of L. sliab díl in Ossory Osraige, Anecd. i 22; in a charter of 1524 Coraghmore and Cahernane, of c. Kilkenny, and Ahenne, Kilclispin and Garridufe, of c. Tipperary, are said to be in Sleywe Dile, Kilkenny J i 359* = Trans Kilkenny Arch Soc 1 (1849) 359*; the p. Windgap, al. Killamery Cell Lámraige, is called by old people Shleea Deela, and Garryduff in p. Grangemockler, b. Slievardagh, c. Tipperary, 2 m. fr. Kilkenny border, is called Garryduff in Shleea Deela, Carrigan, Ossory, i 16; so S D. in Ossory supra means old Ossory, which ext. into c. Tipperary; Kilclispin is a bit N of Ahenna 3.5 m. N, and tl. Garryduff, p. Garrongibbon, b. Iffa & Offa East, 6.5 m. NW of Carrick-on-Suir, c. Tipperary, PGI; tl. Curraghmore, p. Owing, b. Iverk, c. Kilkenny, is 2.5 m. NW of Piltown and 2.5 m. NE of Carrick-on-Suir; thus, Sliab Díl is the hilly region E of Slievenaman, ext. to Carrick-on-Suir, and in

c. Kilkenny to t. Windgap, p. Killamery, b. Kells, c. Kilkenny and to tl. & p. Owing, b. Iverk, c. Kilkennu, nr Piltown; *ansa Mélaigh Moir ar Sliabh Dile, RIA Cat. 3435 (RIA MS 23 P 3 (1242); Plummer, Irish litanies, p. 68*

sliab fúait nr p. Newtownhamilton, b. Fews Upper, c. Armagh; the name is still preserved, and applied to highest mt in the Fews, O'D. in AFM-ndx, AFM; if that is true, Sliab Fuait is the mt the W summit of which is Carrigatuke, 1,200 ft. high, and E summit, Deadman's Hill, 1,178 ft. high; the road fr. Dundalk to Armagh crosses the mt betw. those summits; ‘the parochial surface around the town is partly mountainous, prevailing hilly, and to a large extent romantic’, PGI iii 35; ‘Deadman’s Hill’ seems to reflect the tradition that Fuat was slain, and buried on Sliab Fuait; about 2.5 m. S of Newtownhamilton is the village of Fews, nr which are seen the lines of circumvallation of an encampment about 1.5 m. in circumference, PGI ii 335; nr and S of Fews is Silver Bridge, marked on Scale, Atlas (1776); in support of this identification I give the following items:—Ó Néill went fr. Dundalk through the high road of the Fews to Béal Átha in Airgit (at Silver Bridge), over Sliab Fuait to Armagh, AFM vi 2352; this is Bel an Argib * = Béal an Airgid* in CSPI an. 1587; Ó Domnaill fr. Dundalk went to Fews (an Fiodh, an Fid Mór), next day he went through Sliab Fuait meic Breogain northwards to Armagh, AFM, Betha Aeda Ruaid, 31; the boy Cú Chulainn is told by his mother that S F. was betw.
