Antrim* + this refers to Glenn Fínnechta; Dál Riata was not separated fr. Dál nAraide by r. Buas [i.e. r. Bush], Keating, H. 5. 32, 123a, though it may have been divided fr. An Rúta by that r. (Dál Riata was distinct fr. An Rúta, the Route); the Route—the Presbytery of the Route still keeps the name—lay inland along the Bann; p. Ballymoney* [b. Kilconway & b. Upper Dunluce, c. Antrim]* is in it; Dál nAraide was S of Dál Riata, and far fr. the r. Buas, which is in the N of c.

Antrim; it is divided fr. Dál nAraide by Fregabail, the Ravel Water. It therefore appears that this terr. corresponded with the dry. of Tuaiscert, di. Connor, c. Antrim, AFM i 32; Dál Riatai populati sunt Cruithniu & Ultu, AU i 140; (1) in Ireland fr. the bounds of Dál Araide to the N of c. Antrim; (2) in Scotland, CS 187, MacFirbis, Genealogies, 418; desc. of Cairpre Riata son of Conaire. The terr. of the name in Ireland comprised the N of c. Antrim, fr. which an expedition c. AD 405, founded the Dál Riata kingdom of Alba, AFM i 106; Dál Riata Alban desc. fr. Erc, Dál Riata Ulad, desc. fr. Erc's brother Olcu, K., in the reign of Art Oenfer. In Ireland their district comprised the N part of c. Antrim fr. the r. Bush to Glynn, nr Larne, according to an Irish poem. From this O'D. thinks they were expelled at an early period by Clann Cholla, since in 1177 the Uí Thuirtre and Fir Lí were in possession of all the terr. of D. This prob. requires verification, at least as regards the nature of their possession. The r. Fregabail (r. Ravel Water) elsewhere given as the boundary betw. Dál Riada and Dál nAraide; v. BR (ed. O'D), 160; Dál Riata, VT, ed. Stokes, p. 160; the portion of Cairpre Rígfota, it ext. fr. the r. Bush in the N of c. Antrim to a cross at Glenfinneaght or Glynn nr Larne in the same c. The following foundations by St Patrick in this terr. are recorded: Airther Maige (p. Armoy), Fothrad, Ráith Mudáin (Ramoan Hill, Portrush, or more prob. p. Ramoan [b. Cary, c. Antrim] at Ballycastle), Telach Ceneóil Aengusa (? Grange of Drumtullagh), Domnach Cainri in Cothraige (b. Cary), Druim Finnig, Cúil Echtrann (p. Culfeightrin [b. Cary, c. Antrim]), Dún Sobairche, where he blessed a well (tl. Dunseverick [p. Billy, b. Cary, c. Antrim]) and Carn Láma were in Dál Riata; Dál Riada VT, ed. Stokes, p 162; the extent of this terr. is usually given as fr. the r. Bush falling into the sea on the N of c. Antrim to Glynn nr Larne on the E; but the VT, ed. Stokes, (p. 164) by including in Dál nAraide the churches of Cell Chonadáin and Gluare, tl. St Cunning's, p. Carncastle, [b. Upper Glenarm, c. Antrim] and 'the Old Church' at the tl. Glore, p. Tickmacrevan [b. Lower Glenarm, c. Antrim], restricts it to the extent of the ancient dry. of Tuaiscert. The following foundations by St Patrick are named as in Dál Riata and all that have been identified are in Tuaiscert: Airther Maige (p. Armoy*[b. Cary & b. Upper Dunluce, c. Antrim]*), Carn Láma, Fothrad, Ráith Mudáin (? p. Ramoan, nr Ballycastle [b. Cary, c. Antrim]); there is Ramoan Hill at Portrush, and a Port Moon to the W of Dunseverick), Telach Ceniúil Aengusa (? Lismore to Credan Head, c. Waterford; in 5th century they obtained Mag Femin fr. Aengus, k. of Munster; Ó Bruic and Ó Faolain its chief rulers, BR (ed. O'D), 49; a tributary sub-div. of Mide; descendants of Fiachu Suigde, elder brother of Conn Cétchathach; originally seated in b. Deece, c. Meath, and driven thence by Cormac, son of Art, son of Conn C. C., about AD 254; they then found settlements in c. Waterford in the bb. of Decies, BR (ed. O'D), 184; O'D. suggests that in the text not the tribe but the terr. once occupied by them and then by others is signified; and the fact that the terr. paid tribute seems to show that its occupiers were not of the royal stock; the southern Déissi were a branch of the Déissi of Tara, who migrated into Munster and obtained a settlement in the bb. of Decies, c. Waterford; the ch. of Macc Clarid was fd. here by St Patrick, and there is a St Patrick's well here, VT, ed. Stokes, 208; got fr. The wood of Fid round the ridge of Fid (Druim Feda), tl. Drumfea p. Fennagh, b. Idrone East, c. Carlow; as I gather fr. the following texts that Iserninus, al. bp Fíth (<episcopus Vetus), came to the S part of Ireland, then to his province to a small tribe (aicme bec) in Clíu named Catrige; thence he went and set up at Toicuile, thence to Ráith Fólascich Ráith Fualascaig, to Láthrach Dá Arad; there Cathboth's seven sons came to him and were baptised, and he went with them southwards to their abode; they were exiled for their faith, but when Crimthann, son of Énna Cennselach, was baptised at Ráith Bilech they were restored to their home; hence are the Féna or Fid (or hence is the name Féna on Fid?) Féni; they go to Patrick and Crimthann, son of Énna, at Scí Pátraic, and through Patrick they and bp Fíth get fr. Crimthann son of Énna Nia, 'dul' under Griein Fothart (? l. a part of Ulba of Grian Fothart) fr. Gabor Liphí Gabor Life as far as Suide Laigen, and they settle at Áth Fithot; Patrick went fr. Tara Temair in Leinster, and met Dubthach moccu Lugair at Domnach Már Criathar in Uí Chennselaig, Arm. 18a (tl. & p. Donaghmore, b. Ballaghkeen, c. Wexford); it was at the same time that the Déissi went upon Gabrán, and (the) Féine Féni on Fid Már, and the Fothairt on Gabrán to the E. Dublin and c. Kildare, commands a vast panoramic view including parts of 13 counties', PGI; this latter spot is called 'Lowyn, on the confines of c. Dublin and c. Kildare', in Sweetman, CDI, an. 1304, p. 116; Liamain is the name of the ground fr. which both get the name of Lyons, and the p. of Lyons and p. Newcastle-Lyons adjoin each other; a tribute fr. the Dublin Vikings fr. Liamhain; betw. Tara and Lemain of the Vikings there shall be a battle every year (BR (ed. O'D), 228, 230) must refer to Newcastle 8 miles fr. Dublin, and not to Dunlavin, 28 m. away; wolves devoured him in Scech Connla, beside Liamain, in E of Leinster, MartO², 128; this seems at Skeagh House in p.
